Irishman, who whaled the boys in the daytime but made love to the widow, and the widow's liquor in the evening. She replied his advances towards herself, but made advances toward him with the liquor, for his money was as good as anybody's. The colder she grew to McShiney the deeper he drank and in the course of the winter he often lost control of his tongue, and his wit flowed out as the whiskey ran in. One evening he was gloriously high, and she was sourer than ever, which is saying something very dreadful of Mrs. Boyce, when he turned upon her with one of his most persuasive Irish smils' and said:

"And ah! Mrs. Byce, I had such a dream about you and I-that's myself-last night, an, I did." "Well, what was it, eh?" she snapped out in a way of her own, as if she would bite him if she was hungry. "And I dreamed-I did-that I died entirely and went to the bad place." Of course you did; where else would you go?"

"And I knocked at the door, and they said right out, "Who's there?" and I answered so bold like, It's Mister McShiney from Kingston, in the Jerseys." You can't come in." "And why not?" says I. "We've got one from there, and that's more than we can stand. She makes it two hot for all of us." "Who is it?" says I, and he said, "It's Mrs. Byce, the old tavern keeper's widow," and I waked up straight."

Mrs. Byce never spoke. Her feelings were two big for utterance. With one hand she took the red hair of the Irishman and dragged him to the floor, and opened the door with the other, she sent him forth with such an energy of motion as forbade his return to that paradise again.

LAYING Eggs .- A little incident occurred in a family grocery a day or two since, which, could the reader have seen for himself, would have kept him in laughter for a week. A lean countryman entered the grocery, having in his hand a small basket of eggs which he desired to exchange for sundry housekeeping necessaries. "Want any eggs to-day, Mister?"
"Yes, will take 'em; how many have yer

"Ten cents a dozen." "What! only ten cents a dozen?" "Yes, that's all we get ourselves." "Well, thes, all I've got to say is, it's a shame."

"What's a shame?" "Why, look a here, Mister," and here the countryman patted the eggs affectionately, and viewed them as though they were the veritable product of the giant's golden hen. "Why, look a-here. If you was a hen, wouldn't you think it was mighty hard times if you had to lay eggs for ten cents a dozen?"

The expression of countenance, the sincerity, the indignation, the evident opinion of the egg-raiser that the country would soon go to ruin at that rate, were inimitable; and the merchant, appreciating it justly, "shelled out" eleven cents per dozen for the produce of the countryman's cacklers.

I Don't Dance .-- A plain, unlettered man came from the back country in the State of Alabama, to Tuscaloosa, and on the Sabbath went early to church. He had been accustomed to attend meetings in school houses and private dwellings, where each one appropriated to himself the first seat which he found unoccupied. He selected there a convenient slip, and awaited patiently the assembling of the congregation.

The services commenced. Presently the music of a full toned organ burst upon his astonished ear-he had never heard one before. At the same time the gentleman who owned the slip came up the aisle with his lady leaning on his arm. As he approached the door of the slip, Le motioned for the countrymen to come out and give place to the lady. This movement the countryman did not comprehend; and from the situation of the gentleman and lady, associated as it was in his mind with the music, he immediately concluded that a cotillon or French contra dance was intended. Rising partly from his seat, he said to the gentleman who was still beckoning to him, "Excuse me, sir, excuse me, if you please; I don't dance !"

A PECK OF TROUBLE .-- We pity the subscribers to the Wayne County (Indiana) Journal. At the last account, the editor publisher, and proprietor, together with his wife and two children, were sick-the journeyman was "on a batter;" the devil was unruly and wicked, as all devils are from the old one down; the wood was all out; and the cow hadn't come home.

Musquitoes.-Let a man go to sleep with his head in a cast iron kettle among "them critters," and their bills will make a watering pot of it before the next morning.

I'M READY FOR EITHER.-James Knowles. of Point Judith, in the last war, lived in an exposed situation, near the ocean, and never went to bed without having his gun well charged by his side. One night there was a violent thunder gust which shook the house to its foundation :

"Husband, husband," screamed the wife. "get up, the British have landed, or the day of judgment has come, and I don't know which." "By gosh," said Knowles, springing up, and seizing the musket, "I'm ready Two Irishmen one day gunning, a large flock of pigeons came flying over their heads.

Patrick elevated his piece and fireing, brought one of them to the ground. "Arrah!" exclaimed his companion; what a fool are you to waste your ammunition, when the fall would have killed him!"

VARIETIES .- A vain man's motto is, " win gold and wear it"-a miser's "win gold and spare it'—a profligate's "win gold and spend it"—a broker's "win gold and lend it"-a fool's " win gold and end it"-a gambler's "win gold and lose it"-a wise man's " win gold and use it."
